The aqueduct of Segovia

A girl of Segovia tired of carrying water said "I would give anything to get water to the city".

Nothing more said these words, a man with a goatee approached him from behind and asked if she would give anything to bring water closer to home.

She said yes but told him she was poor. Then the man asked for the soul.

She suspicious of the man and agreed on condition that the water would lead to near his home before the rooster crows in the morning. The gentleman agreed, and after shaking hands with the girl disappeared.

She took the pitcher of water and went his way, wondering if what just happened was a fantasy or had actually happened.

At night while she was sleeping in her bed unleashed a terrible storm. The girl woke up and was terrified. She saw throw the window a man engulfed in flames and flying with great speed stacking large blocks of stone. She saw the devil was building an aqueduct.

The girl, seeing that the aqueduct was running, took a candle and went to the henhouse. She held the candle to the rooster and the rooster saw the light began to sing with all his might.

The devil heard the cockcrow surprised. He was sure he was still far from dawn, and, nearly, he had not completed the aqueduct that had decided to build. Just a stone was missing. However, the contract terms were clear, so resigned, he went away empty handed back to hell.

He left behind a magnificent aqueduct hundred years later still stands
